

Biography of Brian Saliba

Brian Saliba is a writer and game designer from Dothan. He attended the University of Alabama, graduated from Northwestern University, and worked for 13 years in the publishing industry in New York and London before joining the Peace Corps and working in the non-profit literacy sector in California and Southeast Asia. In 2018, he opened his own writing and design studio, which has produced a number of tabletop games and scripts for television and film. He lives in Port St. Joe with his wife and two dogs.